

Scentzilla!

Maryam's Soap Nook

By Scentzilla!

Maryam from Maryam's Soap Nook recently sent me a small selection of her handmade products to try, which I am more than happy to talk about. There were two products that really stood out to me:

One is her rich whipped body butter in the Ginger Cardamom scent. The fragrance is sweetly filled with fruity tones of peach, but the fruit is accompanied by a subtle spiciness. The texture is thick and creamy, with these little granule droplets that melt right into the skin. Perfect for those of us who get nasty winter skin, especially those of us who suffer from flakey elbows.

However, by far and away, I was most delighted by her Lemongrass, Lime & Ginger Shea Butter and Dead Sea Salt Glow Scrub. It's a ginger lover's dream. It smells of real fresh ginger slices, rather than only vaguely spicy like some "ginger" products. The scrub smoothed my skin as it exfoliated, and didn't make it all pink and cranky looking (which unfortunately happens all too often with my sensitive skin.) Moreover, the scrub is salt based, so you don't have to wash down the shower afterwards to keep it from getting scratched. Yes, I am lazy, but that is quite appealing, no?

This stuff is awesome, and I am sticking it straight away onto my Christmas wishlist. (It fits in a stocking, "Santa," hint hint!)

Other products from her line that she sent over included her Camellia Body Oil, a light moisturizing oil that feels silky and non-greasy, her gorgeous handcrafted soaps, and her Exfoliating Body Wash in Gardenia Peach, which was certainly nice, but I was so blown away by her gingeriffic salt scrub that I am recommending that instead!

This post has been filed under Body Care on December 12th Comments \(0\) / RSS